DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1 and 3-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Codignola (3,127,452) in view of Butz et al. (6,936,564).

Codignola discloses a process for hydrogenating styrene by passing upwardly a liquid containing alpha-methylstyrene and a gas containing hydrogen thru a packed bed of a solid hydrogenation catalyst (fig. 1; col. 1, lines 23-28; col. 2, lines 8-47).

The temperature and pressure of the reaction can be found on column 1, lines 30-34.

Codignola does not disclose the superficial velocity of hydrogen gas. However, Butz discloses using a catalyst for hydrogenation process which is operated at a superficial velocity of hydrogen from 20 to 7000m/h equivalently to 0.55 to 194 cm/s (col. 6, lines 8-35).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified the Codignola process by employing at an appropriate superficial velocity such as from 3 to 10 cm/s to arrive at the applicants' claimed process with an expectation that unexpected results can be shown.

Cogdignola does not disclose the size of the catalyst (3) the mole ratio of hydrogen and olefin.

However, the size of the catalyst is a matter of choice. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified Codignola process by selecting the size of the catalyst to arrive at the applicants' claimed process except that unexpected results can be demonstrated.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified the Codignola process to use an appropriate amount of hydrogen required to hydrogenate the olefinic bonds.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1 and 3-5 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
